April Shower, who has been running some very bad races recently, was backed from 10 to 1 down to 4 to 1 to win the fifth event. He jumped away in front and cut out a stiff pace. There was another sleeper in the race, however. At the haif mile Keynote easily moved up to April Shower, and it was apparent then that he could go to the front whenever Hildebrand was ready. He raced April Shower off his feet around the home turn and won in hand by a length and one-haif. Himself was a distant third.
